

Addiction is not confined to one socio-economic class; it reaches all neighborhoods.

Since leaving the District Attorney's Office in 1983, Mr. Prospero has handled and tried more than his share of murder, rape, and drug cases. However, he has seen a drastic increase in the number of clients, students, young professionals, housewives, and executives who are mired in the grasp of addiction. It can involve street drugs or prescription medications or both.

Mr. Prospero has helped thousands of alcohol and drug abusers get their lives back and enable them to be personally and professionally the best they can be without "self-medicating" or getting "high".

He is aware of and takes advantage of many programs both in and out of the criminal justice system for his clients to help them get straight and avoid being entrapped by this addiction and /or the system. He can put you in touch with someone who has "walked a mile in your shoes" so you can better understand that you are not alone in your battle for sobriety.
